There is a fine picture, too, of a scene on the upper Sacramento, California, by F. A. Butman, and a Marine view, exceedingly correct, by W. E. Norton. At De Vries the statue of Susanna is still to be seen, by the payment of the usual fee, and many beautiful paintings besides, though that which we thought was most thrilling, the picture of the Indians, is gone. Gustave Dore s wilderness of summer flowers is still there. It is rather too tangled to please us, but perhaps therefore all the more real. At Williams Everett s are to be seen two of the finest pictures in Boston; one by Paul Veronese, and one by Murillo, one of them valued at $3000. There is a fine picture there, by a Philadelphian, called Harvest Home, representing a picnic gathering when the boys...
