Summary: A riveting account of combat heroism, an analysis of the roots of upstanding personal qualities, and a classic tale of a small-town boy rising to the challenge of world events. The battle for Fallujah as it's never been told, in the words of America's heroic Brad Kasal, who led his men door-to-door into the deadly din of enemy fire. While recovering from his war injuries, Kasal awaits the results of his nomination for the nation's highest combat award, the Medal of Honor. Military insiders say Kasal is likely to become the first Marine Corps recipient of the medal since Vietnam. Kasal's story details his valiant exploits in Iraq and his principles of leadership and loyalty.

Reviews

Extensive information for book fans. It is written in basic words and never hard to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

This publication is great. It is full of wisdom and knowledge. You will not really feel monotony at any time of the time (that's what catalogs are for relating to when you ask me).
