By far the greater number of the many enquiries received BV l-v from British firms desirous of being placed in commuication with enquiries, agents or customers are very vaguely worded. These enquiries could be more satisfactorily answered were they made in the form of separate questions. I notice that German, French, and Scandinavian firms frequently advertise in the local newspapers for agents or firms dealing in their particular products. I recommend this method to British enquirers, instead of trusting to the Consul happening to know of some suitable person. The commercial standing of applicants for such agencies can easily be ascertained through an Information Bureau, of which there are several here. Two large retail shops on the Stores principle have lately possible cash been established, and through selling solely for cash are able to uyers make prompt payments. These establishments deal in almost every class of goods, and should therefore prove likely buyers of British products in daily consumption. The dislike of British exporters to sell on credit is likely to be less of an obstacle than in dealings with other buyers, who, being in the habit of giving credit, are themselves unable to pay cash for their goods. Many complaints have appeared in print to the effect that much of the information given in Consular Reports is received too late in the year to be of practical use. If this should unfortunately be the case, it is mainly to be attributed to the...
